A New Way of Looking at Things

Research at GW:
A Message from
President Lloyd H. Elliott

The 1985-86 academic year was an exceptional one. During 1986 decisions were made and projects initiated that will have impact upon the future of The George Washington University well into the next century.

In my view, one of the most important of these was our decision to limit the size of future freshman classes to fewer students than this year's record-breaking incoming class of 1,333. This action reflects our conclusion that GW today is as large as it ought to be—that we now have the maximum number of full-time undergraduate students (about 5,000) that we can serve effectively. Holding the number of incoming students constant will result in more selectivity in the admissions process, and thus GW will be admitting more highly qualified students. For an institution committed to increased academic quality, this is indeed an important step.

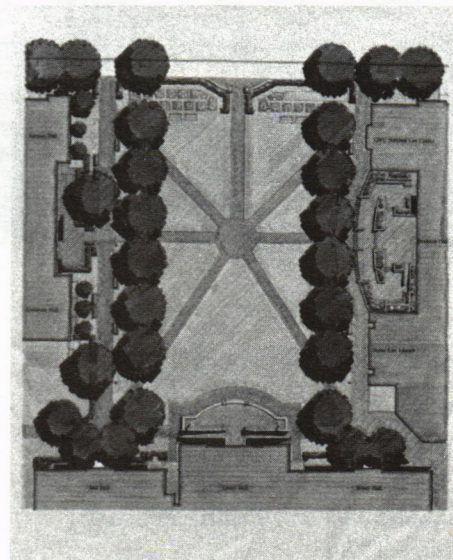

This year saw a number of leadership changes at GW. Now at the helm of our Board of Trustees is Everett H. Bellows. Mr. Bellows, who holds both bachelor's and master's degrees from GW, was elected chairman following the death last year of Glen A. Wilkinson. Other key appointments include the University's new Director of Alumni Relations, Ronald W. Howard, and the new Dean of Continuing Education, Carol Holden. We said farewell to Dennis S. O'Leary, former Dean for Clinical Affairs of the Medical Center. In 1981 Dr. O'Leary became known to millions of Americans as GW's official spokesman during the TV coverage following the attempted assassination of President Reagan. Dr. O'Leary has become the president of the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals. The new Dean for Clinical Affairs is John C. LaRosa, a GW Medical Center faculty member since 1970.

George Washington became one of sixteen southeastern universities participating in an exciting new computer network which ultimately will link leading research universities around the country. Begun by a recent $1.4 million grant from the National Science Foundation, the network will allow researchers nationwide to share information and to gain access to NSF's supercomputers. The incredible power of these machines opens entire new areas of scientific inquiry which we believe will greatly contribute to national and regional long-range technical growth and economic strength.

During the year we also began implementing a number of the recommendations of the Commission for the Year 2000, including a program of interschool study that allows students enrolled in one school to apply for a program of study in any other undergraduate division. This change in university policy was recommended by the GW Student Government Association as well as by the Commission report. Other Commission goals now being addressed include remodeling Gelman Library, renovating research and instructional labs in Corcoran Hall, and expanding the capabilities of the Computing Center.

An architect's view of the renovated University Yard.

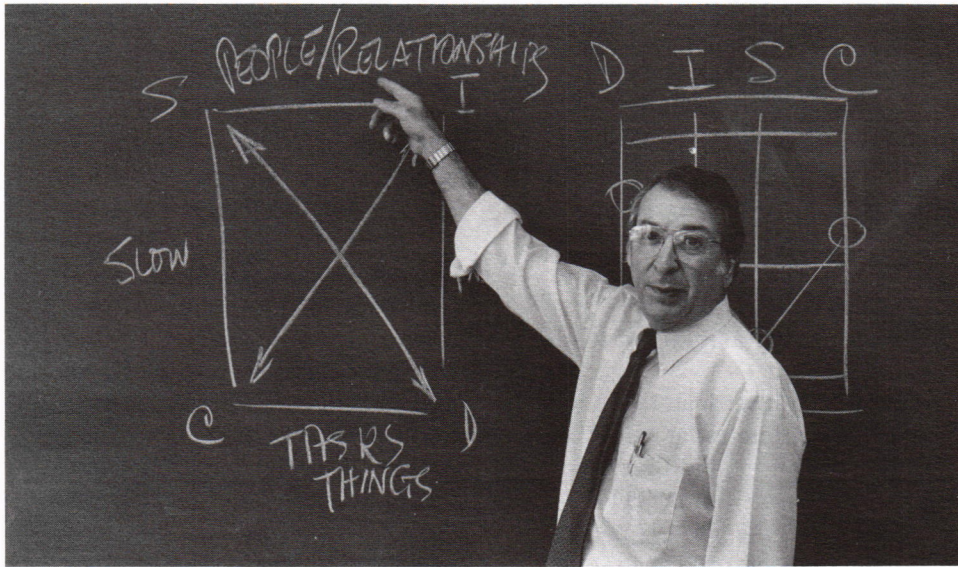

This summer, we began a major project to improve the University Yard. This work—made possible through the generosity of Trustee Oliver T. Carr, Jr.—involves extensive landscaping, with new trees, shrubbery, and lawn areas, as well as underground drainage systems, brick pathways, and a new platform for Lisner Hall. The result of this project will be a handsome centerpiece for our campus.

Two additional 1986 initiatives of note are the planned Northern Virginia Center for research and instruction, and the creation in our Graduate School of Arts and Sciences of a Graduate Institute for Policy Education and Research.

The Northern Virginia Center, to be located on a 50-acre site in Loudoun County, Va., will be part of a 576-acre research and development park. The Center will provide unique educational and research programs to furnish industry with a solid base for applied research. Corporations with offices and laboratories in the park will be able to work with University faculty on joint projects, and GW will be in an ideal position to provide the educational programs required by industry.

Meanwhile, the mission of the new Graduate Institute is to stimulate multidisciplinary education and research on our campus, as well as to enrich and strengthen the base of resources available for graduate studies here. Achievement of these goals could be a major step toward establishing GW as an academic center for education and research on public policy questions.

"... the mission of the new Graduate Institute is to stimulate multidisciplinary education and research on our campus...."

Prof. Sal Divita, enjoying the challenge of the classroom.

Clearly 1986 was a year marked by progress in many areas, and I am pleased to report that this upward thrust applies as well to GW's financial condition. Complete financial details are provided elsewhere in this report; however, there is one dramatic figure that I wish to share with you: this year the University's endowment surpassed the $200 million milestone; at this writing it stands at $214 million. This endowment places us among the top one percent of all American higher education institutions.

As impressive as that figure is, we cannot afford to rest on our accomplishments. The Commission for the Year 2000 has given us a blueprint for advancing GW to a place among the finest universities in the nation; the challenge before us is to translate that blueprint into reality. For that reason, on May 15 GW inaugurated the first University-wide fund-raising campaign in its history, a $75 million "Campaign for George Washington." Campaign goals encompass the basic elements of academic excellence: professors, students, educational and research programs, teaching and research equipment, and libraries.

Of course, excellence requires more than money, but money is, nonetheless, a necessary prerequisite. It is no coincidence that the largest university endowments exist at those very institutions most Americans regard as the finest—Harvard, Princeton, Yale, Stanford. If GW hopes to match these outstanding institutions in quality, it must aim to match them in resources as well.

Amid a year so full of initiative and innovation, one should bear in mind that the primary work of the University—teaching and research—continued forward at full pace. We graduated more than 4,000 students in February and May ceremonies, and we honored some 1,500 outstanding young scholars at our April Honors Convocation.

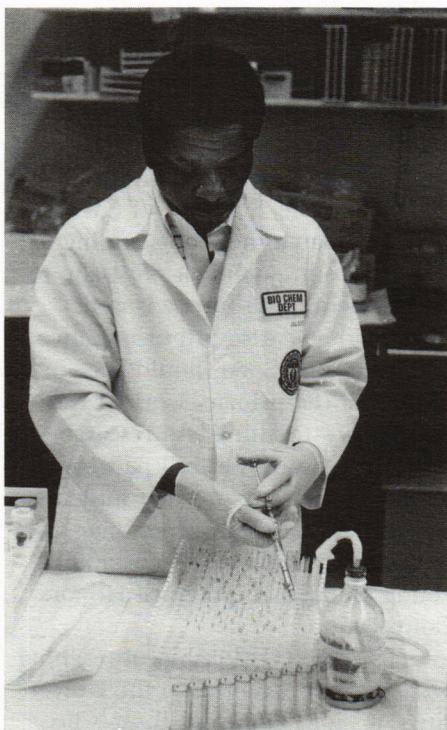

The interrelationship of teaching and research is central to the University's mission. There are those who say "teaching is a university's main function," and others who strongly disagree with that conviction. At GW, we believe that teaching and research are mutually reinforcing and that both are equally important to the University's achievement of its full potential in the years ahead.

Thinking about research at GW, I recalled a thought of Henry Miller's—"One's destination is never a place but rather a new way of looking at things." That idea seems to characterize much of this year's research at GW. All across our campus, committed researchers are attempting to push back the limits of knowledge. The following is a sampling of some of the highlights.

Biomedical investigators are looking with special interest at cardiovascular disease, cancer, and the immune response. Professors Linda Gallo, John Bailey, and the late George Vahouny have been seeking to understand how the body absorbs cholesterol and how this process can be the aging process, and, with Professor Allan Goldstein, studying the synthesis of prostaglandins and leukotrienes in the laboratory of Dr. Jack Vanderhoek. Dr. Goldstein has, in addition, been working toward development of a vaccine against AIDS.

Cancer, cholesterol, and AIDS also are subjects of different research foci in the Medical Center, where programs encompass both laboratory research—directed to gaining a clear understanding of disease mechanisms—and clinical studies, which involve the evaluation of new treatments, drugs, and devices. Professor Gary Fiskum's work here focuses on regulation of metabolism in cancer cells, while Professor Katherine Kennedy is examining the effects of drugs on cancer cells. Two areas of investigation include both laboratory and clinical components. One of these, led by Professor Allan Goldstein, is directed to the use of biological response modifiers, such as thymosin or interleukin, in the treatment of AIDS. The second area of both lab and clinical study involves the work of Professor John LaRosa on cholesterol metabolism and the use of diet and medication to decrease cholesterol levels.

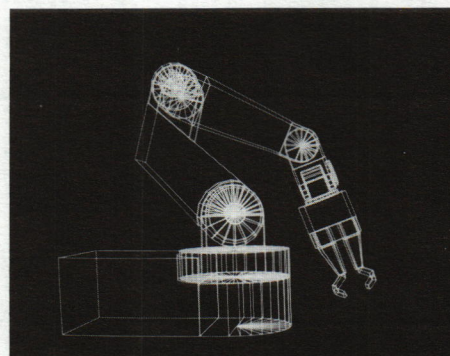

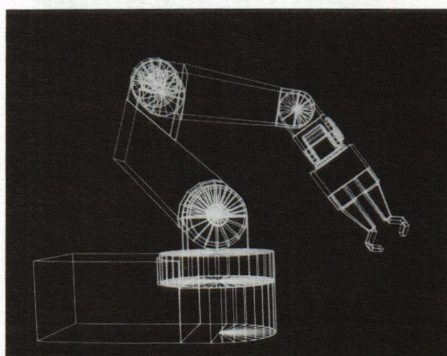

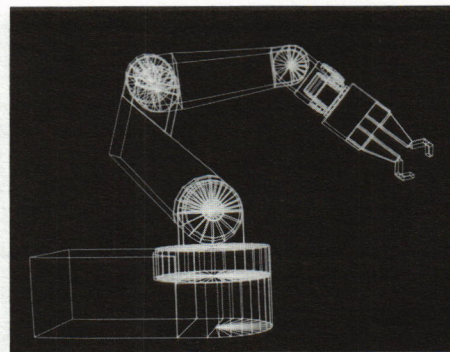

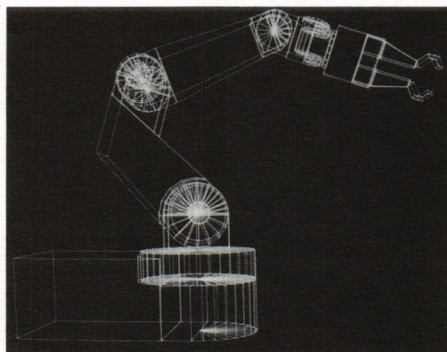

In the laboratory—prime battleground in the fight against 1986's killer diseases.

manipulated to control blood cholesterol levels. With Professors Ajit Kumar, Terry Moody, and Gary Fiskum, they also have been doing basic research on cancer, investigating how the immune system affects Prof. Paul Naylor, an investigator in the quest for a vaccine against AIDS.

Understanding the inner workings of the atomic nucleus is a major goal of work in our Physics Department, where Professor Donald R. Lehman and a group of theoretical physicists work closely with an experimental group led by Professor William J. Briscoe. Theoretical work on three-body models has complemented experimental work on the nucleus of lithium. The success of models in predicting the clustering behavior of neutrons and protons in the lithium nucleus opens the way to important new knowledge about the structure within the atomic nucleus.

This winter marked the first anniversary of our Center for High Technology, which focuses on strengthening engineering and technology in the United States, with particular emphasis on educating and training students for research and fostering technology transfer. Research in the field of engineering takes many forms at GW, where interest in civil, mechanical, environmental, and electrical engineering and in computer science, engineering administration, and operations research has led to the establishment of research institutes in such areas as computers, artificial intelligence, flight sciences, reliability and risk analysis, management science, water resources, and fatigue, fracture, and structural reliability. Engineering enterprises such as these have contributed to our long and successful record of cooperative research and educational efforts with government laboratories and industrial organizations.

These efforts are impressive, but one should not suppose that research at GW is limited to engineering and the physical and biological sciences. Especially because of our location in the nation's capital, much of our research centers on issues of public policy. Our new Graduate Institute in this field, described earlier, is just one example. Another is the highly regarded work of one of the country's leading space policy analysts, Professor John M. Logsdon—focusing, lately, on analyzing policy options for the future of the U.S. civilian space program. Also keenly concerned with the interaction among scientific development, technological change, and government activity is Professor Robert W. Rycroft, who is widely recognized for his work in the field of energy policy.

Other faculty members get even more directly involved in federal policy; Professor Joseph Cordes, for example, was a coauthor of "Treasury One" tax reform bill. And Professor Gaston Sigur, Director of GW's Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies, earlier this year was appointed Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs by President Reagan.

Professor Joseph Gastwirth spent his Guggenheim Fellowship year at the University of California, Davis, where his research centered on statistical problems arising in law and public policy. A major focus of the year's work was the development of statistical methods for the analysis of equal employment data; also under investigation were statistical problems arising in epidemiological studies on such conditions as Toxic Shock Syndrome and Reye's Syndrome.

Since 1967 GW has been home to the Center for Social Policy Studies, directed by Professor Sar Levitan. The Center seeks to bridge the gap between economic theory and practical problems in devising effective labor and welfare policies. One ongoing study, for example, examines the issues of the rising number of "working poor," those who work but remain impoverished. Another reviews the Job Training Partnership Act of 1982, which expands the role of state and local governments and the private sector in job training.

At the opposite end of the economic spectrum, the merger phenomenon and questions of efficiency are topics of study for Professor John E. Kwoka, Jr. The aim of the investigation is to find means of evaluating the results of antitrust enforcement, so as to permit useful mergers but avoid acceptance of others whose merits are more doubtful.

"The Center for Social Policy Research . . . seeks to bridge the gap between economic theory and practical problems in devising effective labor and welfare policies."

Burns Law Library facilities support inquiry by both faculty and students.

While our economics faculty members concentrate on the present and future, other professors are adopting a somewhat longer perspective. Anthropologist Alison Brooks, for example, spent the summer in Zaire, participating for the second consecutive year in the multidisciplinary search for early human remains in the Semliki Valley—an area where tools in association with animal bones and teeth dating back 2.3 million years were found by the Semliki Research Expedition last summer, and where evidence for ancient environments may suggest new models for the origins of human physical and cultural adaptations.

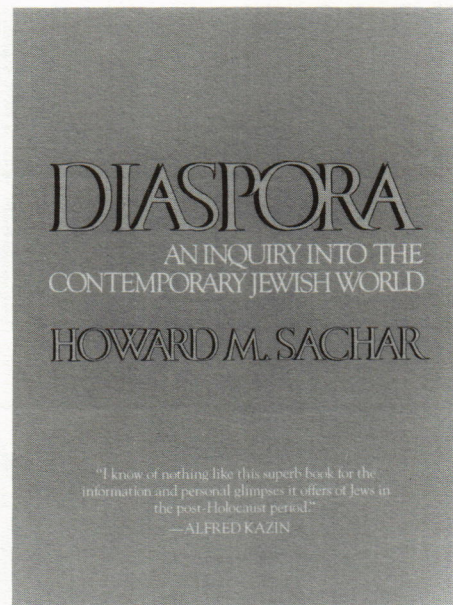

Closer in time than Paleolithic Africa, but just as remote to many Americans, is the Islamic world of Central Asia. Here the policymakers are Soviet, and their task is to gauge the effect of resurgent Islamic religion on the 45 million Muslim Soviet citizens, as well as on Muslim nations adjacent to Soviet frontiers. This topic is central to the work of Associate Professor Muriel Atkin, who is at home with the Russian, Persian, and Tajik languages and who brings a historian's view to this and related questions.

Legal research is an area in which work at GW both reflects and impacts upon American society. Professor Gerald Caplan has recently examined the question of whether the Miranda rule is still viable, and another law professor, Peter Raven-Hansen, is the author of a new textbook on Civil Procedure.

The research interests of Associate Professor of Education Dennis Holmes relate to decisions at both the city and state levels. One project focuses on the implementation of the D.C. Public School Board's policy to establish a mechanism to induct and train new teachers, using experienced teachers as mentors. Professor Holmes also is conducting a study of the arts education programs in seven model sites for the Maryland State Department of Education. These model programs were funded by the National Endowment for the Arts. Maryland intends to use the results of the study to set up similar programs throughout the state.

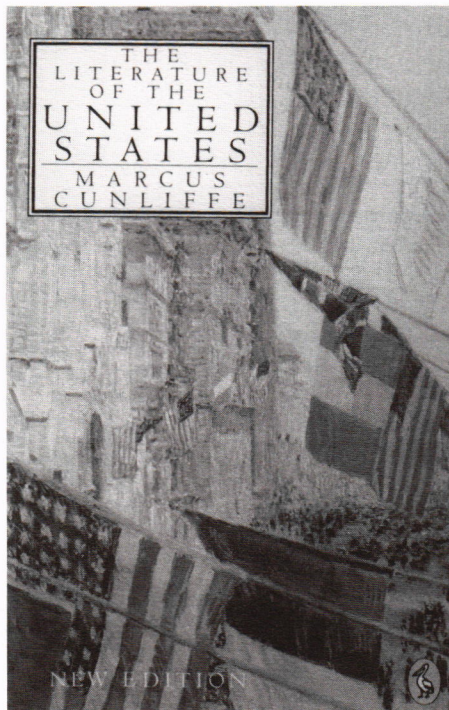

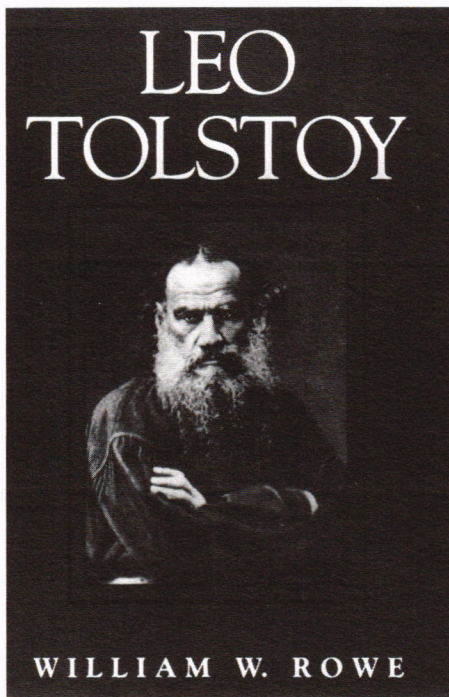

Methods of communicating research conclusions take many different forms. Certainly GW researchers publish widely in the scholarly journals of their individual disciplines. Many also publish textbooks. This year, for example, Professor Thomas Nagy published a text on artificial intelligence and expert systems, and Professor Warren Greenberg published one on health care economics and quality of patient care. Law Professor W. Thomas Mallison coauthored The Palestine Problem in International Law and World Order. Professor Howard Sachar published the widely acclaimed Diaspora, and Professor Leo Ribuffo's The Christian Right won the Merle Curti Award of the Organization of American Historians. And we share Professor Robert H. Walker's pride in his Pulitzer Prize nomination for Reform in America: The Continuing Frontier.

Robert H. Walker

Reform in America The Continuing Frontier

The lists—of GW professors' books, research projects, and other scholarly pursuits—go on and on. There is no space for anything like an exhaustive inventory; my intention here is merely to provide you with a flavor of the research enterprise at GW. This brief overview may have prompted you to wonder what makes a given kind of research important, and there really is no simple answer to that question. Some things are intriguing just because we find them so. Then there is the sheer intensity of interest that certain topics arouse on the part of scientists and scholars. Finally, there is research that bears clear implications for the lives of all of us. Those are the projects that have established the strongest claim on public concern. And it is through those projects that GW remains at the forefront of the fight against the major problems confronting humankind: disease, ignorance, and, indeed, our very future on this planet and in space. To join in the quest for solutions is our challenge, our duty—and our privilege.

Campaign for George Washington

Report from the General Chairman, Oliver T. Carr, Jr.

The Campaign for George Washington, the largest fund-raising effort in the history of the University, was launched by the Board of Trustees in 1985. This first University-wide campaign continues through 1990 and will help provide the resources needed to move GW clearly into the top ranks of American universities, through the achievement of the highest levels of academic excellence. The campaign seeks endowment funds supporting professorships, scholarships, fellowships, library collections, research, and academic programs in the undergraduate, graduate, and professional schools. In addition, capital resources are needed for research and educational equipment, computers, and library enhancements.

The Annual Fund also is an integral part of the total campaign. Annual giving during 1985-86 and throughout the campaign counts toward the campaign goal. Not only must annual giving continue, but increased Annual Fund support for the University and all the schools is essential to our goal of increased excellence in the years ahead.

By the time of the Campaign's formal announcement in May 1986, a nucleus fund comprising nearly $22 million of the $75 million goal already had been achieved through the gifts of Trustees and other close friends and members of the GW family. This total included six gifts of $1 million or more and a number of gifts at the six-figure level. This outpouring of unprecedented generosity gives evidence of the enthusiasm and confidence that those who are closest to the University hold for its future.

So many have worked so hard that it is difficult to point out only a few. Nevertheless, I especially note the leadership of three distinguished leaders—Thaddeus A. Lindner '51, Robert G. Perry '70, and President Lloyd H. Elliott. Tad Lindner, as Chairman of the Trustees' Committee on University Development from 1976 to 1986, gave exceptional leadership in the extensive planning and preparation for this Campaign. As Chairman of The Luther Rice Society and one of the University's most dedicated alumni, his contributions to GW are beyond measure. The continued growth of the Annual Fund reflects the leadership of Annual Fund Chairman Bob Perry and the more than 600 volunteers who worked with him on "George Calling" Phonathons and other annual giving efforts. Finally, throughout the Campaign's first year, the leadership and inspiration provided by President Elliott has been the driving force behind our confidence and success. All three of these leaders merit our heartfelt gratitude for their hard work and unflagging enthusiasm.

Through their support this past year, all of those listed in this report have given us encouragement that the Campaign's goals will be achieved, and these donors have our deep gratitude. Of the total $23,040,755 million pledged to the Campaign for George Washington, $14,966,123 was received in 1985-86, a 23 percent increase in support over the previous year. Once again, alumni support of the Annual Fund reached record levels in 1985-86. Particularly gratifying is the continued growth in the number of alumni who support the Annual Fund. Alumni participation increased 20 percent over last year. Indeed, our University's Annual Fund program was recognized by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education as a finalist in a competition to identify the most successful university programs in the nation. In summary, more people are giving more money to The George Washington University, and the effects of this generosity are increasingly evident in the quality and reputation of its programs.

Traditionally, our University has benefited greatly from dedicated volunteer leadership, and the commitment and energy of such volunteers will play a vital role in the success of this Campaign as well. Members of the Board of Trustees, for example, have given very generously of their time in planning and launching this program. Our Campaign has made an excellent beginning, thanks in large part to their efforts.

As the Campaign moves into its second year and beyond, I look forward to reporting continued outstanding progress toward our goal. The Campaign is a challenge for GW, but it is a challenge we can meet by working together—all of us—alumni, Trustees, students, faculty, and friends. There is no task more worthy of our time and resources. The challenge of building a great university in the heart of our nation's capital offers each of us an opportunity to truly make a difference. Those listed in this report already have responded to that challenge. I know that you will continue to do so and to be joined by others in the years ahead.

The Luther Rice Society

Chairman:

Thaddeus A. Lindner, BA '51

Luther Rice was pre-eminent among the founders of The George Washington University. The Luther Rice Society was organized in 1968 to perpetuate the memory and ideals of Luther Rice and to give proper recognition to all those who have continued to give exceptional financial support to the University. To provide for such recognition, those who give or pledge gifts of $10,000 or more are granted lifetime membership in one of four associates categories. Annual membership is extended to contributors of $1,000 or more.

The George Washington University is deeply indebted to the members of the Luther Rice Society for their leadership and for the high standards they have set for all alumni and friends of the University. Their generosity ensures the University's continued growth and development.

Telephone (202) 676-6145

September 12, 1986

To the President and the Board of Trustees
The George Washington University
Washington, D.C. 20052

Submitted herewith is the Financial Report of the University for the year ended June 30, 1986. The report includes a statement of financial condition at June 30, 1986 and June 30, 1985 (Balance Sheet-Exhibit A) and a summary of the financial activity for the years then ended (Statement of Changes in Fund Balances-Exhibit B). Price Waterhouse has examined these statements (Exhibits A & B) and the "Notes to the Financial Statements" and its report is included.

A condensed summary highlighting the financial results of the past year is included followed by the audited Financial Statements and the report of Price Waterhouse.

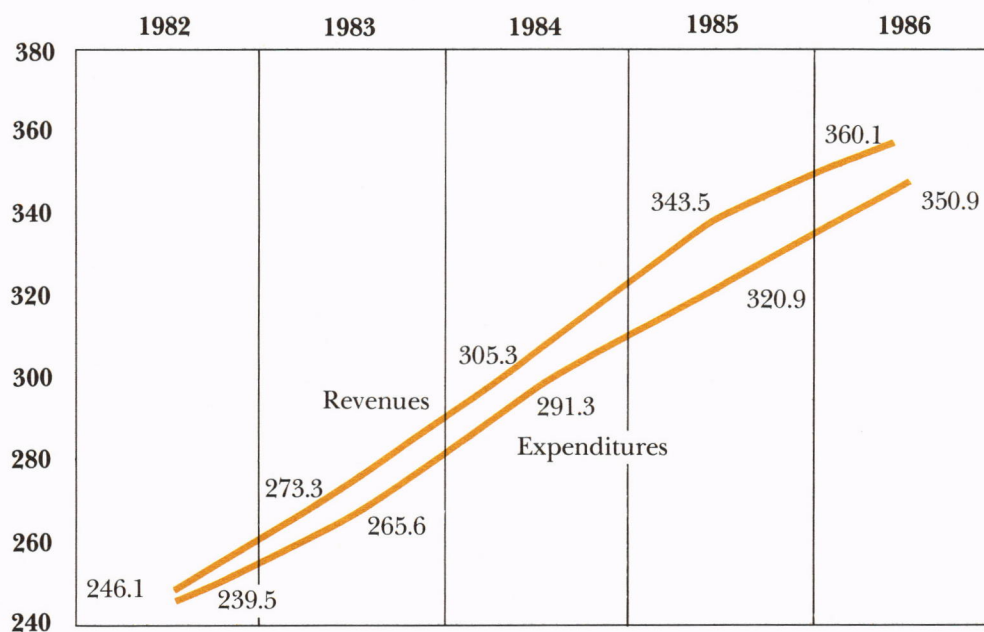

Respectfully submitted,

Frederick J. Naramore
Comptroller

Notes to the Financial Statements

For the years ended June 30, 1986 and 1985

Accounting Policies The financial statements of the University are prepared on an accrual basis of accounting in accordance with the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants' audit guide for colleges and universities. The University's accounting policies in respect to certain items, for which alternate standards are recognized, are enumerated below.

Restricted gifts are reported as current income in the period received rather than in the period used.

Endowment income, excluding gains and losses on sales of investments, is reported and distributed as earned. Gains and losses on the sales of investments are accumulated with the endowment funds' principal balances.

The University does not record depreciation of physical properties except for Hospital buildings and equipment. Hospital depreciation charges are not included in current expenses but are recorded in the Plant Funds as reductions of asset value and Net Investment in Plant.

Interest incurred during construction is capitalized as part of the cost of capital projects.

Note 1—Valuation of Investments Investments are stated at cost or, in the case of donated investments, at the fair market value at date of acquisition.

Note 2—Temporary Advances These advances represent the temporary use of Current Funds pending the receipt of monies from other anticipated funding sources including grant and loan agreements and the receipt of pledged gifts from various donors.

Note 3—Group Contract Settlements Hospital charges paid under patient care group contracts are subject to audit and retroactive settlements by third party payors. Estimates for the 1986 and 1985 settlements under these agreements have been provided.

Note 4—Self-Insurance Trust Effective July 1, 1979, the University established a self-insurance trust for professional liability claims. The trust fund, which is held by independent trustees, is funded based upon actuarial determinations. In addition, the University maintains umbrella coverage for amounts in excess of the basic self-insurance program. Possible differences between the amounts charged to expense and included in the self-insurance reserve and the ultimate costs of settled claims and claims expenses are not considered significant in relation to the University's overall financial position and changes in its fund balances for the years ended June 30, 1986 and 1985.

Note 5—Endowment and Similar Funds Assets of Endowment Funds, excluding Funds Held in Trust by Others, had book values at June 30, 1986 and 1985 of $123,016,542 and $110,365,542 and market values of $208,083,097 and $169,776,259 respectively. These funds include 55 funds which are separately invested and 368 funds which are invested on a pooled basis. A summary of book and market values, as of June 30, 1986 and 1985 together with unit value information and earnings per unit in the Consolidated Endowment Funds, is presented below:

Note 10—Pension Plans Full-time faculty and staff are eligible for participation in the University's retirement annuity program. The program is administered by independent fiduciaries to whom all funds are transferred for investment purposes and annuity payments. Individual contracts issued under the plan provide for full and immediate vesting of both the University's and the participants' contributions. In addition, certain retirees whose employment pre-dated establishment of the retirement annuity program receive supplemental past service benefits which are funded on a current basis. University contributions and direct payments to retirees amounted to $7,569,475 in 1986 and $6,740,533 in 1985.

Note 11—Contingencies The University is a defendant in certain pending civil suits. In the opinion of the University, the University has a good defense to the claims not covered by insurance.

To the President and the Board of Trustees
The George Washington University
Washington, D.C.

In our opinion, the accompanying balance sheet and the related statement of changes in fund balances (Exhibits A and B) present fairly the financial position of The George Washington University at June 30, 1986 and 1985, and the changes in its fund balances for the years then ended, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles consistently applied. Our examinations of these statements were made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.
